Did I ever say I'd marry you, darling?

DED 1: MY armpits are making you so sorry you? All I can remember of my first and teenage sex is a hole—and your hand!

It's not as if I didn't milk, smelly and 1: I was there, gaily, with you. But the milk wasn't yours. And you said, "But the milk was mine. And you said I was justly in the world. We have come in that first time we have come."

But watching a woman, leaning in to do, milk, it's like the child. It is yours, and sometimes we understand what we have than most we do not.

That's the way it was this time.

All my life, I guess, I've dreamed that morning like morning. Big morning, holy morning—you know how I do it, and what it is? And all along, I've looked forward to the day when I'll be ready to let nothing go, my own home, family, my church? Even the weather? Because that would be a kind of symbol, situation, of the life we share together . . . our home, our friends.

So when I opened the house, sharing, and saw the beautiful old Serling— I got excited, I got my breath? I mean, was such? I couldn't find the words to tell you how I felt. All I could say was, "Thank you, thank you, thank you."

is right? And—well, I think you understand.

Because I understand it's a thing I'll spread on, we're production and making the seeds plant not to being, you grower may not have heard of it the you're you're a man.

And independent day tomorrow on Victory by buying Victory Bonds?

Victory Bonds aren't made a thing tomorrow. They help you save now a full the new and better things you'll want to buy when they're so available.

“...giving all,
daring all,
enduring all—
to the utmost—to the end.”

CHURCHILL
(After the fall of France)

CHURCHILL'S famous words after the fall of France apply every bit as much today as they did when the war's end was years away and its outcome desperately uncertain.

Victory is now assured . . . but the end is not yet. Our fighting forces are still heaving cruel hardships, wounds and death. Their fighting needs grow day by day. The wastage of war mounts up and up. And with the war's intensity at its peak Canada's over-all borrowing needs for war purposes are greater than ever before.

That is why we are all being asked to buy Victory Bonds in the coming Seventh Victory Loan to the very limit that our means will allow. What true Canadian can ignore this voluntary means of serving "to the utmost—to the end"? And what could be sounder than to salt away in Victory Bonds money that it is now neither patriotic nor profitable to spend?

So get ready now to buy Victory Bonds. But because the need is so much greater, resolve to buy one more Victory Bond than you have bought in any previous Victory Loan.

Use for the purpose the dollars that you no longer have to include as compulsory savings with your income tax—add every extra dollar that you can spare from your essential needs. Whatever the cost in self-denial may be, Canada must still count on you.

Get ready to buy

1944

40TH
ANNIVERSARY

...The building of a great car . . . . a great industry..a mighty war plant

In 1904 when a little group of Canadian business men decided to found a company for the manufacture of automobiles, they little dreamed what a historic step they were taking. They were convinced that the motor car would one day be an important means of transportation, though most people at that time looked upon it as a rich man's plaything. But it is doubtful if they foresaw that in forty years their little plant would grow into an industry employing thousands of men, supplying cars to millions of men and women through hundreds of Ford dealers. Little did they dream that in a future war of nations, Ford Motor Company of Canada would become the Empire's largest single source of military transport.

1904 Ford Motor Company of Canada, limited, opened a company of operations on a small building, formerly used as a wheat factor. Seventeen men were employed. Cars were assembled from parts imported from Detroit. In the first year 11 Ford cars were produced.

1908 After two years of experience, the Company decided to standardize on the Model "T" Ford car, using mass production methods. With increasing demand, the plant was expanded to ten times its former size. By 1912 the employees numbered 565.

1913 Ford of Canada first started building cars on an engine thereby creating a new motor outlet for Canadian car buyers. Since its introduction five years earlier, the Model "T" engine had already become famous for its simplicity of design and absolute dependability.

1915 By this time there was a chain of more than 550 Ford dealers and nine Ford Branches across Canada. The Company also believed it owed a debt to the public—that of providing expert service and genuine parts for Ford cars as long as those cars were in operation.

1916 In a season continued. The year 1914-1916, called for added work. In 1916-1917, production reached a new high of 30,000 units as a new factory, assembly plant and paint shop were erected in London, Ontario, and a new plant in Toronto, Ontario.

1927 Re-planting the entire plant, Ford of Canada introduced the new Model "A". The car's modern design, power steering and low cost equipment won it instant acceptance. Black-coach from several different models with color and upholstery options.

1932 Saw the introduction of the Ford V-8 engine. For the first time, a powerful, smooth, V-type eight-cylinder engine was made available to Canadian motorists in the popular price field. Its economy and simplicity made it the talk of the automobile world.

1939 70% of all automobiles exported from Canada were built by Ford, more than half of the entire Ford output going abroad. The four export business, started with the founding of the company, was built up in every part of the British Empire outside the British Isles.

1940 Ford, Canada, with 100,000 employees, was a large volume of war equipment and heavy machinery were made to meet requirements. As each 1940 groundwork for top-down military vehicles had been laid in co-operation with the Department of National Defense.

1942 The first passenger car for the home, 100,000 units of the assembly of the previous 12 months. Now, the company's huge production was to be well equipped for war equipment and essential vehicles.

1943 Ford employees increased to 150,000. Double the number prior to war. 4,500 Ford employees joined the Armed Services. 15,000 blood donors were given at the Ford Centre. Employees had invested $10,000,000 in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates.

1944 Mileage, August 1st, the Company's 40th anniversary—and out of its miles was that comes a General Carver, the 2-6/8th of its kind, the 338-5-8th military vehicle for World War II, the 1,001,162nd unit produced in Ford of Canada's 40 years.
